Robbed of Her Name

As he spoke there rose all unbidden the vision of the young man kneeling beside the stream—all unbidden and all unweave. With a flash of assurance that she should think of him at that moment, she answered quickly: "No, no one else. Whom should there be, father?"

"Whom, indeed?" he said. "Then that is all right. You have removed a weight from my mind. I was, I thought, that has been crushing it—she stopped suddenly, as if regretting what he had said, and moved to the table. "Now, dear, I have some letters to write."

She went and touched his forehead with her lips as he had touched hers, and left the room. Her own apartments were in the south wing, and consisted of a bedroom, a dressing-room and a bathroom. Geoffrey's habits and wants were as simple as the late Duke of Wellington's, and his own rooms almost as sparsely furnished as were those of the Iron Warrior, but for his toilet could be too good. The walls were lined with tiled satin of a dark maroon, upon which the few pictures, some of water colors, rested like gems. A small, round, round wood table stood in an angle of the wall, and some choice exotics upon one of the tables. There was a Chippendale bookcase with some standard works in fine bindings, and an easel upon which stood a half-finished head.

Beside a small table sat a woman of middle age, and of that peculiar warlike which proclaims the peace of the south. This was Mrs. Mabel, wife of the late Duke of Wellington, and she was as much at home in the world of the Iron Warrior as she was in the world of the Iron Warrior. She was a strange woman, and, unlike most of her countrywomen, remarkably quiet and reserved. On Mrs. Mabel's devotion and passionate love of which it is said only an Italian peasant is capable. She had been a member of the household so long and in such an intimate connection with the young mistress of the house, that she was considered as something superior to the other servants, and spent most of her time in Mrs. Mabel's rooms, to which her own bedroom adjoined.

She looked up quickly as Mrs. Mabel entered, and her dark eyes seemed to fall over her like a flash of lightning, then hid themselves behind her hair almost as long and quite as dark as her own. "Well, Felice," she said, dropping into a chair, "still at work? Why do you go out this lovely day?" "I am happy enough indoors, signorina," she said, in the musical Tuscan tone. "I am as happy as a queen when I am at work for the signorina. Are you tired?" she asked, suddenly, fixing her eyes on her. "Not in the least. I was only thinking, Felice, she said, "that my hair is now, please, and she stood up. Felice, with playful hands, that seemed scarcely to touch her, so deftly they worked, slipped off the hair. As she did so she looked at the girl with her finger. "The signorina has long hair, has she?" "Yes," said Mrs. Mabel, looking at the girl in the light of the penitence. "Been jumping again?" said Felice in an accent almost of reproach. "No, I have not, Felice. Didn't I promise my father and you that I wouldn't jump when I was alone, and do you think I don't keep my promise?" "How did you do it, then?" asked the woman, fingering the hair. "The hair of her father and mother, and the hair of the beautiful girl, who stood looking out of the window, and she said, 'It was not caught in a gate?' 'No! There is no mad-singorina has not fallen. So!" "You never guess if you tried for a month, Felice," said Mrs. Mabel, smiling, "but I am not a fool. I don't mean to tell you, you need not say any more questions." The woman did not express the travon sketch of a man, dropping the charcoal with a little grimace, seated herself at the piano and began to sing. But just as the young man's face had been between her and the sketch, his face seemed to mingle with the air she was singing, and with a gesture of impulsion and a flash of assurance on her face, she rose and shut the piano.

CHAPTER IV

The day was over, the candles were alight in the drawing-room, and Geoffrey's Knight sat with a book in his hand, waiting for the dinner-bell. He usually came down half-an-hour before five, and the source looked at the door and again, for to-night she was late. But presently she came in, and his face cleared somewhat as his eyes rested upon her with a glow of pride and admiration in them. "No wonder that Lord Montacute waited to marry me! No wonder that half the man in the count's coat at his feet!" Then he sighed, and, leaning back in the chair, he said, "I was not going to tell you, but I did not even get so far as that," she said, and once again resolved to tell him all. She opened her lips, but at that moment there was the sound of carriage wheels on the drive, and the

EVANS' STORY OF THE SOUTH

Told to Large Crowd at L.
O. O. F. Temple

PRaise For Scott

And For All of His Noble
Little Band

The L. O. O. F. Temple was crowded to its capacity last night, when Commander Evans lectured on the Scott Antarctic Expedition. Evans, with two companions, was the last to see Scott and his gallant companions alive. The speaker drew a very vivid picture of the life of the party after they had left civilization far behind. Putting his own attractive personality into the story, Commander Evans related an inspiring and interesting tale of the harsh heroism and nerve that was needed to bring the country she is today.

His opening words were of matter-of-fact as his entire speech, sailorlike, was based on words. He took up the story immediately, and told how Captain Scott's party of fifty-nine scientists, officers and seamen, chosen from 5,000 volunteers in New Zealand in 1901, "Terra Nova" on Nov. 29th, 1910, she carried provisions for three years, 19 pounds and 34 sledges. Barely out of civilized waters, she encountered a gale, which threatened to bring the expedition to defeat. The illustrated views were particularly clear, and one could imagine the huge waves sweeping over the little vessel.

Five hundred miles after she entered pack ice the party were not ashore at McMurdo Sound, as what was called, after the speaker, Cape Evans, their first winter quarters. The ship was constructed, and as the speaker drew it out, it contained all modern conveniences. On Jan. 23rd, 1911, the ship and eleven companions started south and went as far as One-Ton Camp. Provisions were placed here, and the ship was taken, but the real dash for the pole was not made until October, 1911. The start was made from One-Ton camp. Soon after leaving it was found necessary to shoot the ship's dogs, as the sleds were running out, and the little boats were suffering terribly from the cold. The spirit of the animals was shown here, when the speaker stated that many of the pony drivers shared the biscuits with the animals, so great an attachment had been formed by them. Facing the scarcity of food, Lieut. Meares, who was in command of the first supporting party to return to the base, decided that his party could go without one meal a day, and the speaker pointed out that had not his brave party reached the expedition might have been even more disastrous than this was.

On reaching the point where Commander Evans and his party were to return to the base, the little party were within 147 miles of the pole. Captain Scott here thought that it would be necessary to take one man with him, but he intended for the last stage of the dash. Lieut. Bowers, the smallest man of the expedition, was chosen, as he was touching to hear Commander Evans relate the parting of the two parties. Though he stated that his friend, Captain Scott, and his gallant companions would not return, they watched Captain Scott and his party until they were but a speck on the white landscape of snow, and Commander Evans and his two companions began the long 116-mile march by the lake. It was necessary for this party to cover 17 miles per day, and they discovered that on the first day they had only covered 12 miles. The 17 miles represented the distance between each depot, where they were to rest. They held a short consultation, in which they decided to march ten hours a day, instead of nine, and to make the time to twelve. On this trip Commander Evans was stricken with neuritis, being paralyzed from the waist down. He begged his companions to leave him and proceed to the base, but they refused to do this, and, leaving him on the sleds, pulled him to within 16 miles of the lake. Their strength failed here, and Seaman Green proceeded alone, and managed to reach the base in an exhausted condition, and Evans and his remaining companions were rescued by Dr. Atkinson, who later on found the bodies of Captain Scott and his party. The speaker referred to the most glowing terms of the gallant leader of the expedition, stating that he was an Englishman and a gentleman.

Commander Evans stated that the most steepest words of little or no use to the party. Much more progress was made with the dogs and the ponies. The speaker was introduced by Col. Hines, of the Thirtieth Regiment. Commander Evans is a well-built, muscular-looking man, about 35 years of age. He has a distinguished bearing, and is decidedly English. His lecture was profusely illustrated by maps and photographs of the country through which the expedition passed. Moving pictures were also taken of the party until they reached One-Ton camp after which nothing but necessities were carried.

Professor Wright, the Canadian from Toronto, was especially praised by Commander Evans. When Dr. Simpson, the physiologist and meteorologist, was recalled to mind, Wright took his place, and it is entirely due to him that the world has the figures of the second year of the expedition. At the Beardmore Glacier he was asked to guide a supporting party back, and he guided them through 600 miles of unknown country.

THE NORONIC

Northern Navigation Company's Empress of Lakes.

It was in 1893 that the Saronic, then known as the United Empire, was cut away from its moorings and slipped, severely into the blue waters of the Great Lakes. As she rode there on the shifting breeze, in all her queenly splendor, none begrudged her the title of "Empress of the Lakes." She seemed to embody all that country men of the day regarded as the van of a kingdom from which she took her name.

Stretched out 263 feet in length and with a beam of 34 feet, she represented the last word in shipcraft creation of her day. The world worshipped at her shrine. People looked with awe and wonder on her 1,500 tons of luxury. The event of the Saronic, with her safety and excellent equipment, greatly increased the tourist trips up the Great Lakes from Saronic to Port William, Port Arthur and Duluth. In the matter of speed and safety, the Saronic held its own with the rival ship 1910, when the Northern Navigation Company decided to rebuild this splendid vessel in its old hull frame had withstood the buffets of the angry waters in a wonderful manner and all it needed was some modern improvements in the way of passenger convenience to restore it almost to its former splendor.

But last year the ever-increasing demand for the Saronic, as the Northern Company demanded greater passenger facilities than the good old Saronic could give, out of this demand for a larger and finer vessel grew the Noronic. Whereas the Saronic has a nominal tonnage of 1,500 tons, the new Noronic can sleep 600. In the matter of dining room facilities, the Noronic far eclipses the Saronic. Two hundred and seventy-eight people can dine in the magnificent Noronic saloon, while but 56 could be taken care of on the old Saronic. In other ways, such as smoking rooms, lounging rooms and promenades, the Noronic demonstrates the advancement of modern day ship construction. The Noronic will take up the burden so long and gratefully borne by the Saronic, that in covering big hands of tourists the thousand delights of a trip from Saronic to Port Arthur and Duluth. But even in the pride the Northern Navigation Company officials feel in the latest of their ships, the Noronic, there is still a deepening feeling for the passing of the good old Saronic, which has served so faithfully and so well through all these years.

TOM WALLACE

Will Not Be Disciplined—
About Church Parades

Ottawa, March 26.—The Minister of Militia does not intend to discipline or in any way criticize the action of Captain Tom Wallace, M.P., of the Canadian militia, in sending a message to Sir Edward Carson saying that thousands of loyal Canadians were with him in resisting the coercion of Ulster and were ready to help him with men and money "to the hilt."

In the Commons this afternoon in reply to Mr. Edmund Proulx (Protestant) Col. Hughes said he knew the message had been sent. He added: "The alleged cablegram does not seem to have any relation to the duties of Mr. Wallace, as an officer on the reserve, and the Minister is not called upon to express any opinion with regard thereto. Any attempt to discipline Captain Wallace in the case now being considered would be not only improper but illegal."

Dr. J. W. Edwards (Protestant) asked if the Government had its attention drawn to an editorial in The Canadian Patriot, Col. Hughes simply replied that "it is the custom in every part of Canada and the British Empire for the militia to attend church parades wearing side arms, according to regulations."

67 YEARS IN CONVENT LIFE.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 26.—The funeral of Mother Superior of the Sisters of the Holy Family was held this morning from Mount Lovejoy. The mother superior had been in convent life 67 years. She was 82 years of age. The funeral, which occurred late Saturday night, was solemn and was due to sympathy.

MURDERED TEACHER

Little Falls, N. Y., High School Student Confesses.

Little Falls, N. Y., March 26.—Joaquin Giamini, under arrest for the murder of Miss Lydia Beecher, the young school teacher, who was found beaten and strangled to death in the woods near Poland, has confessed his crime, according to District Attorney Farrell.

Giamini says in his confession, which was made Saturday and disclosed today, that he had asked Miss Beecher to go with him to see his parents in regard to his reinstatement in The Poland High School, from which he had been expelled at the young woman's instigation. He told her, he says, that they were at a farm house about half a mile beyond his home. Before their arrival Miss Beecher became frightened, he said, and insisted upon returning. Giamini declared he then hit her with a wrench which he had concealed in his pocket and knocked her down. Then he beat her, stabbed her several times with a knife, dragged her body into the bushes, and buried her.

Now a fellow can always blame the train conductor for getting home late.

CRICKET GROUNDS

Mr. Studholme Strongly Objected to Bill Passing.

Mr. Hanna Spoke Favorably of the Measure.

Toronto, March 26.—When the Hamilton bill came up for a second reading in the Legislature yesterday Mr. Allan Studholme raised a strong objection against the clause exempting the cricket grounds from taxation. The vacillating policy of the Private Bills Committee came in for severe censure, and the protests of Mr. Studholme at last had the effect of stopping the progress of the bill until Col. Hendrie, who was its sponsor, could be in the House.

Mr. Studholme commended the Private Bills Committee on their decision with regard to the purchase of the stone quarry in submitting that question to the people for their approval or otherwise, but strongly condemned their action in dealing with the other portion of the bill, which related to the cricket grounds. Mr. Studholme stated the idea that that ground was a playground, and stated that last season this association took over $12,000 in gate receipts, and of this was handed over to the cricket ground association a sum of $2,000. The Trades and Labor Council and other bodies had proposed against the decision of the Private Bills Committee, and he contended that as in the other case, the people should be consulted. He wanted a square deal, and declared that the Hamilton Amateur Athletic Association were not entitled to get exemption from taxation. If these were granted it would simply mean adding to the burden of the people.

Mr. Goodham (South Toronto) expressed himself favorably to the bill, saying that it was an encouragement to amateur sport, and it was only a matter of a few hundred dollars.

Hon. Mr. Hanna pointed out that under the bill, as it was before the Private Bills Committee, the assets of the association were really made a public trust. They could not be converted, nor the surplus proceeds distributed among the members of the association. The information before the committee was that a charge was made to football matches. They had to have revenue to keep a ground of that kind up to the standard.

He came back here on the evening of February 19 and set fire to the house where his wife was living with her parents. He was tracked through the snow by officers and arrested on a C. P. R. express just as it was leaving the city for Windsor. He claimed in court that he knew nothing of the incident, nor why he had been arrested.

He was examined by local physicians and kept under observation for several days. He is said by his associates to have a hasty temper and to be most violent when enraged.

The customs officers have since learned of the contents of the chests and are trying to trace them, but they are no longer in Belfast, having been secreted in some unknown places.

The Express also prints a Belfast despatch to the effect that the Unionist Volunteers succeeded in smuggling in guns and distributing them throughout Ulster, but its correspondent evidently had not learned the plan adopted.

London, March 21.—A despatch from Belfast to the Daily Mail says Maxim guns in twenty chests have been landed in that city under the names of the customs officers despite the prohibition of the importation of arms into Ireland. The guns were parked in actions and surrounded by tea.

The duty on tea was paid in London, from which place the guns were cleared.

5 YEARS FOR ARSON

Heavy Sentence Handed
Out at Chatham.

Chatham, March 26.—For attempting to burn down the house of his father-in-law, Edward Capman, on Taylor avenue, Orlan Jewel was today sentenced to five years in Kingston by Magistrate Harcourt in the County of Chatham. Jewel had trouble with his wife, and attempted to commit suicide by gas and acid, but failed. He was in a local hospital for several days, and after his release went to Walkerville.

He came back here on the evening of February 19 and set fire to the house where his wife was living with her parents. He was tracked through the snow by officers and arrested on a C. P. R. express just as it was leaving the city for Windsor. He claimed in court that he knew nothing of the incident, nor why he had been arrested.

He was examined by local physicians and kept under observation for several days. He is said by his associates to have a hasty temper and to be most violent when enraged.

The customs officers have since learned of the contents of the chests and are trying to trace them, but they are no longer in Belfast, having been secreted in some unknown places.

The Express also prints a Belfast despatch to the effect that the Unionist Volunteers succeeded in smuggling in guns and distributing them throughout Ulster, but its correspondent evidently had not learned the plan adopted.

London, March 21.—A despatch from Belfast to the Daily Mail says Maxim guns in twenty chests have been landed in that city under the names of the customs officers despite the prohibition of the importation of arms into Ireland. The guns were parked in actions and surrounded by tea.

The duty on tea was paid in London, from which place the guns were cleared.

Line System Done Away With

Montreal, Que., March 21.—There will be almost a general reorganization of the playing rules of professional hockey for next season was practically assured at a meeting of representatives of the National Hockey Association and the Pacific Coast League held here yesterday. The session was a lengthy one as not only the playing rules and the penalty system were discussed but two of the three men who lowered the coast league by draft were selected. Each of the clubs in the H. A. is allowed to alternate one player with any three of their members while the Coast League has the choice of the others. The two men chosen by the Patriots to-day were "Skeene" Mahan, of Ottawa, and Geo. O'Grady,

The most important change suggested is in the penalty system. It was almost unanimously decided to away with fines and for any infringement of the rules a player shall be ruled off for a stated period. The time set for the minor and major penalties was not decided on but it is likely that it will be of the same duration as the penalties used in the recent Stanley Cup matches. A player will be given a warning, after which he will be ruled out for five minutes and a second offence his penalty will be increased.

The rule introduced the latter part of the season not allowing players to body-check one another into the feet will also be adopted.

A RUSSELL-KNIGHT For $2,775

Ever since its record-breaking test at West Toronto, we've been deluged with demands for a $3,000 RUSSELL-KNIGHT.

Every man seemed to want this wonderful motor.

Men who had been offered cheap Sixes—

Men who had been considering other good Fours—

Men who appreciated QUALITY, but felt that $3,000 was their limit—

Men who refused to pay for imported cars 35% more than their actual worth.

All united to demand a car of RUSSELL-KNIGHT with the famous RUSSELL-KNIGHT Motor—at a lower price.

But—could we lower RUSSELL price without lowering RUSSELL standards? And RUSSELL standards must be maintained at any price!

Finally, the solution came to us through one of the very men who started the demand.

"I want a car like your '28,'" he said. "I want your King motor, because I KNOW it's the best in the world. But $3,000 is all I can afford to spend. Now, in fact, than I originally planned. Now I don't need all the equipment that goes with your car. I'll do $3,000 car equipment. I can do with considerably less. Leave off some of the extra trimmings—and sell me a $3,000 RUSSELL-KNIGHT."

Logical—simple—like all things, once you know how.

We worked out that plan. Eliminated some items of equipment—luxuries on $5,000 and up cars. They're the accessories you won't find on any other car but the RUSSELL-KNIGHT. (And if you afterwards think you'd like to have them, they can easily be added at regular cost.)

So that here—at last—is a RUSSELL-KNIGHT.

—the car with the World's Champion Motor—

—the most comfortable car in the world—

—the car of unequalled flexibility and economy—

—the cheapest car of its size and class to maintain—at about the same price as you figured on paying for a car of lesser value and lower grade.

EXAMINE—before you believe. Let RUSSELL superiority convince you that THIS IS THE BEST BUY IN CARS.

Not to see this car to-day is to risk the loss of an early delivery date, and perhaps to even miss entirely this opportunity of getting the BEST CAR VALUE ever offered in the Canadian field.

Temperance Advance

Hanna Opposes Saturday

and Holiday Closing

Toronto, March 31.—The Whitney Government Block, which has been against another suggested temperance reform; the closing of bars on Saturday afternoon and on legal holidays, in moving the second reading of the bill providing for these restrictions, made a strong plea to the Government to give its support. These holidays were starting the treating system and beginning of drunkenness among the young men. If the Government could use its way to support this bill when the interests were opposed to it they would then know that the present Government was not in alliance with the liquor party. In 1911 the Government amended the liquor license act by which the hotel and saloon were closed on Christmas Day. The first Christmas that this came into force brought the police magistrate of Toronto the day after. He would it be if the bars were closed on every legal holiday?

REJECTED BY MR. HANNA. Mr. Hanna took exception to Mr. McDonald's reasoning with regard to alliance with the liquor party. On the same line of argument he wondered who were the allies of the liquor party prior to the time when the Conservative party came into power. He said that just as happened he had before him some twenty-five or thirty chances of liquor. He said that just as happened he had before him some liquor license act since the session of 1906.

In their legislation for the Province of Ontario, he maintained, they were keeping pace with the liquor party, and their legislation with the liquor party administration of law as the condition of things in the Province warranted. He would say, as one having charge of the department, that he was not prepared to do so to favor 12 o'clock closing on Saturday. He also thought that the closing of every legal holiday would be going further than the closing of the Province of Ontario.

PROVINCE WANTS MORE REFORM. Mr. S. Clarke (West Northumberland) opposed that it was a great mistake to the Province to give the temperance legislation had gone as far as the people were prepared to go.

He strongly favored the bill, and said he could never understand why, for instance, if the Saturday of the last three of the year, he would apply to New Year's Day. Something should be done also for the afternoon and evening drinking.

Mr. Mulrooney (Northumberland) said that the Conservative party was in alliance with the liquor interests.

Mr. McDonald's speech about when he interviewed you.

Mr. Mulrooney spoke from the bar, and said that he was not for the bartender getting his holidays.

The Government supporters, he said, had made it the liquor license act. Now the Government had the opportunity to make another amendment.

The debate was adjourned.

NATIONAL GAS CO.

A large deputation of the Hamilton Licensed Allied Trades waited on the Board of Control this morning, asking for the same water rate as granted to the city manufacturers and laundries. J. G. Farmer, C. K. Cooke on their behalf, and stated that much of their material was used in a great extent by the travelling public for which the public themselves paid nothing.

Mayor Allan asked as to whether they were willing to pay the same rate of water as the city manufacturers and laundries, and thought that if they did it might be a good thing, to which statement Controller Morris emphatically added a loud "Hear, hear."

Mr. Farmer contended that such action might satisfy some of the temperance people in the city, and that the custom of hotelkeepers, Toronto charged the same rate as the city, with a discount of 10 per cent.

Controller Cooke pointed out that Toronto had $400,000 last year on their water supply.

The deputation contended that Toronto was willing to lose this amount for the benefit of the general public. The licensees had been raised from $100 to $150, and the water rate as at present standing doubled the cost of the license.

R. Simpson, Royal Hotel, said that they were fifty-six hotels in the city, which amongst them spent one million dollars yearly in the city, and gave as much, if not more, to charity than any other body. Fifty per cent of the water by hotels was used by the public, for which the hotelkeepers did not receive one cent in return.

WHITNEY GOVERNMENT OPPOSE FEMALE FRANCHISE

ROWELL'S REPLY

Wants Itemized Account From the Hydro-Electric

Toronto, March 31.—Because the Ontario Government feels that there is no general demand for an extension of the electoral franchise to women, the proposal of Mr. J. C. Rowell (West) to give the municipal vote to married women who own property was vigorously squelched in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. After several attempts to reach this stage, the order paper the adjourned debate on the second reading was taken up before supper last night, and Mr. Rowell's speech was not heard until 11 o'clock in order that the division be held at a reasonable hour. Mr. Rowell's speech was a representative of the anti-franchise movement in the province. He stated that the Government was not in a position to consider the franchise for women at this time. ## ASQUITH IN FIGHTING MOOD

Consulted King Only On His Latest Move

NEW ARMY SYSTEM May Be Result of Changes in Contemplation.

London, March 31.—Mr. Asquith apparently consulted no one except the King before his bold decision to take the War Secretaryship. His colleagues in the Cabinet seemed to be as surprised as the other members of the House when he revealed his plans. Mr. Asquith is already First Lord of the Treasury, which office he will continue to hold. He has not merely shifted from one office to another, but the resignation of his seat in the House of Commons would not have been necessary had he not been legally advised that the acceptance of "an office of profit under the Crown" in the words of the statute, necessitated a new election, although he will take only one salary, £25,000.

The political seers gather that Mr. Asquith is in fighting mood. They believe that he was showing the effects of the heavy strain of his long labor in the House, and would gladly see the Government in a position to make a new lease of life, and proposes to make the reorganization of the army a first-class issue.
